Call for Papers:
IPSA 22nd WORLD CONGRESS
MADRID, SPAIN

The International Political Science Association (IPSA) will convene its 22nd World Congress in Madrid, Spain from July 8 to 12, 2012.

If you wish to participate on a Research Committee 45 Quantitative International Politics panel, please submit your paper proposal (including paper title and abstract) directly to me and through the IPSA website as soon as possible. Topics dealing with war, peace, and international political economy, among others, are welcome. Also indicate if you wish to serve as a panel chair or discussant.

RC 45 Panel 1: Quantitative Approaches to the Study of Conflict and War

The focus of this panel encompasses the study of all aspects of intra- and inter-state conflict and war by means of quantitative methodologies. Topics include, but are not limited to, domestic political and sectarian violence, revolution, foreign intervention in civil war, foreign policy belligerency, transnational terrorism, and inter-state violence and war.

RC 45 Panel 2: Quantitative Approaches to the Study of Cooperation and Peace

The focus of this panel encompasses the study of all aspects of intra- and inter-state cooperation and peace by means of quantitative methodologies. Topics include, but are not limited to, processes of democratization and economic development, institutionalization, civil-military relations, international mediation, international organization, regional integration, and globalization.
