The Global Health and Social Medicine minor will explore the relationship between human rights and health and pays special attention to the factors contributing to health inequities locally and globally. The skills and training that students will receive in the Global Health and Social Medicine minor are transferable to careers in a variety of health-related fields including medicine, nursing, public health, and social work. The minor requires the completion of 18 credits.

Class list:
- ANT 2100 Introduction to Anthropology, 3cr
- ANT 3400 Medicine, Health, and Society, 3cr
- ANT/GLS/PH 3410 Global Health
- ANT 5400 Anthropology of Health and Illness, 3cr
- 6 credits of Electives (See website for applicable classes)

For more information about the minor: bulletins.wayne.edu/undergraduate/college-liberal-arts-sciences/anthropology/global-health-social-medicine-minor/

For more information about the anthropology department: www.clas.wayne.edu/Anthropology/